Mary Cron and Bryan are organizers and facilitators in Transformation Ministry for the past six years.
This ministry is dedicated to the purpose of helping people experience transformation, healing, and renewal through Biblical principles of truth and God's power.

Process:

It involves using Christian based truth principles to help sexual abuse survivors deal with past hurts and emotional pain in order to experience transformation, healing and recovery. The healing process involves individuals recognizing and exploring the origins of their real and present emotional pain and identifying any possible lies or unhealthy beliefs. By utilizing and applying God's principle truths to these lies or unhealthy beliefs, people have experienced permanent transformation and freedom from their woundedness.

This ministry involves training and helping other concerned individuals become actively involved with facilitating and helping victims experience this transformation and healing in their life. Currently there are about ten people involved with this ministry, but only three are actively involved in talking with sexual abuse survivors. A facilitator/counselor in Nashville works with the Transformation Ministry as their full time ministry.

This ministry often reaches out and helps those individuals that are either unwilling or reluctant to seek the help they need from secular resources. Transformation ministries also provides a means by which the community of faith can be made a vital part in helping people find health and wholeness by working together with the professional community.
